

Mr. Charles Tasco (colored) was called forward. He said that it seemed but yesterday when, at this capital, it was proclaimed to the nation that black men had no rights that the white man was bound to respect. But God had raised up Abraham Lincoln (loud applause) and his party to break down this infamous institution, and erect freedom in its place. (Applause.) The black man's blood reddened the soil of Bunker Hill, and shall it not be shed now? ("Yes, yes.") Our country now promises us "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." We have been negligent. Do we expect to sit down and enjoy these privileges without some sacrifices on our part? ("No, no; let us fight.") Without the shedding of blood there is no remission.

Mr. Charles Tasco (colored) was called forward. He said that it seemed but yesterday when, at this capital, it was proclaimed to the nation that black men had no rights that the white man was bound to respect. But God had raised up Abraham Lincoln (loud applause) and his party to break down this infamous institution, and erect freedom in its place. (Applause.) The black man's blood reddened the soil of Bunker Hill, and shall it not be shed now? ("Yes, yes.") Our country now promises us "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." We have been negligent. Do we expect to sit down and enjoy these privileges without some sacrifices on our part? ("No, no; let us fight.") Without the shedding of blood there is no remission.