

Miss Mary Ann Shadd said, she had been interested in the proceedings, and was glad Dr. Bias had referred to Canada. The question of buying farms should not be ignored by a company of coloured men elected by a National Council. She agreed fully with that part of the Resolution advocating agricultural pursuits, for such was the foundation of the prosperity of the United States. She thought that we should be liberal enough to let persons look beyond their present confined domains, and go to Canada, if they desired. In West Canada, there are now men owning several hundred acres of land who, a few years ago, were in chains at the South. The labouring man in West Canada received a compensation of 1,50 dols. per diem for his labour, against 75 cents paid in New York. She thought the actions of many of the members endeavouring to stifle the vital point, viz.: the right to go anywhere on this Continent. She administered a rebuke to some of the members, by informing them, that they were not simply sent here to make speeches, but to act upon matters by which the elevation of coloured persons would be accomplished.
