

"The Dr. took the stand and delighted the convention with a short, brilliant and instructive address on the history of the past, and the part which the colored people have taken in the struggles of this nation for independence and its various wars since its achievement.

Mr. P. is a graduate of America's 'Peculiar Institution.' His graduation fees were paid only very recently by the beneficence of sundry English ladies and gentlemen; and his Doctrate of Divinity was conferred on him by one of the German Universities. Dr. Pennington claimed for his race the honor of being the first Americans whose bosoms were fired by the spirit of American Independence. And that claim, we think, he amply justified by documentary evidence.

He read sundry antique papers, collected by him with great pains for the archives of the State of New York, showing, that some thousands of colored people in that State, thirty years before the Declaration of Independence was promulgated, were charged by the King of Great Britain with conspiring against his authority, attempting to throw off their obedience to him, and seeking to possess themselves of the Government of the Colony of New York. Some of them were banished, and others were hanged. Those colored fathers of his, said the Rev. Doctor, attributed their slavery to King George, and maintained their rights to freedom to be inviolable.

"The Dr. took the stand and delighted the convention with a short, brilliant and instructive address on the history of the past, and the part which the colored people have taken in the struggles of this nation for independence and its various wars since its achievement.

Mr. P. is a graduate of America's "Peculiar Institution." His graduation fees were paid only very recently by the beneficence of sundry English ladies and gentlemen; and his Doctrate of Divinity was conferred on him by one of the German Universities. Dr.

Pennington claimed for his race the honor of being the first Americans whose bosoms were fired by the spirit of American Independence. And that claim, we think, he amply justified by documentary evidence.

He read sundry antique papers, collected by him with great pains from the archives of the State of New York, showing, that some thousands of colored people in that State, thirty years before the Declaration of Independence was promulgated, were charged by the King of Great Britain with conspiring against his authority, attempting to throw off their obedience to him, and seeking to possess themselves of the Government of the Colony of New York. Some of them were banished, and others were hanged. Those colored fathers of his, said the Rev. Doctor, attributed their slavery to King George, and maintained their rights to freedom to be inviolable.

Subsequently, when the white fathers of our Revolution, 'walking in the footsteps of their illustrious predecessors,' declared against Britain's King, they said to his colored fathers: That King did make you slaves. Now come you and help us break his rule in this country, and that done, we'll all be free together.

Dr. P. exhibited to the audience an autograph petition of the colored people of Connecticut to the Government of Connecticut, presented immediately after the Revolutionary war, and praying that Government to comply with the promise which had been made them of freedom, and under which they had help fight the battles of that war.

He read, also, an autograph paper of George Washington, dismissing from the service of that war, with high recommendation of their courage and efficiency, several colored men; and also certificates of a like character from numbers of officers, both naval and military, in both our wars with England. We wish we could give Dr. P.'s whole speech, and especially in his own well chosen words."

Subsequently, when the white fathers of our Revolution, "walking in the footsteps of their illustrious predecessors," declared against Britain's King, they said to his colored fathers: That King did make you slaves. Now come you and help us break his rule in this country, and that done, we'll all be free together;

Dr. P. exhibited to the audience an autograph petition of the colored people of Connecticut to the Government of Connecticut, presented immediately after the Revolutionary war, and praying that Government to comply with the promise which had been made them of freedom, and under which they had help fight the battles of that war.

He read, also, an autograph paper of George Washington, dismissing from the service of that war, with high recommendation of their courage and efficiency, several colored men; and also certificates of a like character from numbers of officers, both naval and military, in both our wars with England. We wish we could give Dr. P.'s whole speech, and especially in his own well chosen words."